FDA Lays Out Annual Covid Shot Plan Similar to Flu

Americans will get a clearer idea of how often they'll roll up their sleeves for Covid-19 shots when advisers meet this Thursday to discuss an immunization schedule that looks more like the one used for flu.

The plan would have health officials meet each June to review which strains of the virus should be included in Covid shots to be deployed no later than September of the same year, according to documents released by the US Food and Drug Administration ahead of the Jan. 26 meeting. Moderna Inc. and the partnership of Pfizer Inc. and BioNTech SE are the biggest makers of doses for the US.

Why does this plan look similar to the flu plan?

Experts from around the world convene annually to make predictions about which flu strains will dominate during the upcoming season and should be targeted by shots. The FDA is looking for a similar coordinated effort to take place at least as often for Covid shots, one of several moves the agency hopes might help simplify the immunization process and encourage more Americans to stay up to date.

Why an annual vaccination?

Decreasing immunity from vaccinations and the emergence of new variants every few months has led regulators to recommend variant-targeted boosters, a tactic that so far has been unpopular among Americans and has even split some health experts on costs and benefits. Just weeks after rolling out the updated BA.4 and BA.5 boosters in September, new mutations were rampant. Now, even as the US sees the rise of an immune-evasive variant called XBB.1.5, booster uptake is hovering at about 15%.

potential updates against multiple strains, including XBB.1.5, and will be ready to deliver if an update is requested by regulators," Moderna spokesperson Christopher Ridley said in an email. Pfizer didn't immediately respond to a request for comment.

"Although the use of the bivalent mRNA boosters is supported by the available evidence, their deployment has been Both associated with significant implementation complexities," the FDA said. Switching to one composition for both primary shots and boosters will help streamline the process, according to the agency documents.

Evidence suggests that immunity from prior exposure to the virus along with vaccination will provide enough protection so that most people will need one annual Covid booster, according to the documents. However, young children who might not have been previously exposed and people who are at higher risk for severe disease may need two yearly shots, the FDA said.

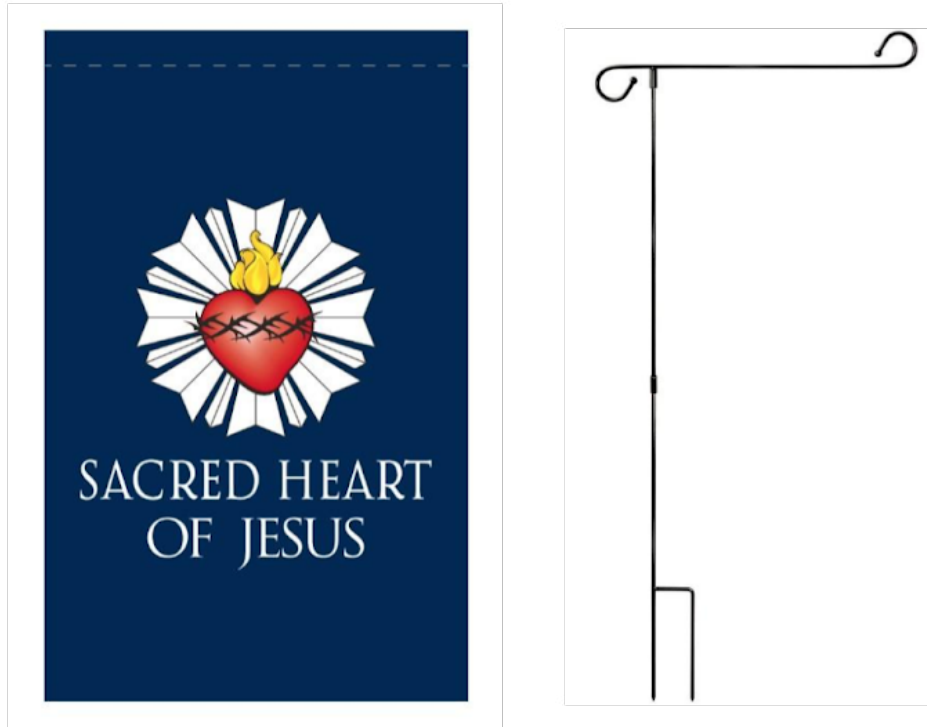

An annual vaccine would be ideal because people would remember, they can do it with other vaccinations like FDA is still concerned about evasion of vaccine-induced immunity by mutants of the fast-spreading omicron strain, according to the documents. That warrants continued surveillance of variants and also monitoring of the protection previous vaccines provide against new strains.

Pfizer and Moderna Inc. are both working on next-generation vaccines that hold up against mutations and provide longer-lasting protection, but it's unlikely those will be ready to go into arms anytime soon.

Wishing you a healthy week ahead,

Nurse Geri

Dear Parents and Families:

Get Ready! The Scholastic Book Fair is coming our way (YAY!). Choosing their own books empowers kids and inspires them to become Bolder, Prouder, and Stronger Readers. AND—as always—every book they buy earns rewards for our school.

Here's what you need to know about the Fair, which will take place from January 22-January 27 at our Sacred Heart School Library:

On January 22nd, we will host our Book Fair Grand Opening from 10:00am-1:00pm. All families and friends are encouraged to come out and shop while enjoying coffee and donuts.

During the school week, each class will have an opportunity to visit the Book Fair. Parents and guardians are invited to join their child(ren) during their designated time. The shopping schedule is as follows:

This year, we are also participating in the Scholastic Book Fair Classroom Wish List program. This is an effective way for teachers to let families know which books they would love to add to their classroom libraries. Our teachers have created wish lists that will be kept in the library during the week of the Book Fair. When entering the Book Fair, you may choose the wish list of the teacher(s) who you want to purchase for, then find the book(s) and complete your purchase.

If you can't make it to the Fair, you may shop at our school's Online Book Fair. All orders ship directly to your home, and shipping is free for book orders over $25. Your online orders will also benefit our school.

Olive Wood Carvings from the Holy Land

Holy Land Gifts at Sacred Heart January 28 & 29, 2023

These beautiful olive wood carvings are made in home workshops by Catholic families in the Holy Land who rely on their sales to tourists as their main source of income.

Recent hostilities and COVID restrictions have curtailed tourism to the Holy Land, resulting in 90% unemployment in these traditional olive wood workshops.

The Catholics of the Holy Land ask for the support of your prayers and the purchase of these handcrafted artworks. Proceeds from sales generate employment opportunities and monetary funds for 600 Catholic families in Bethlehem.
